EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR STATEMENT

On behalf of the Alaska School Activities Association (ASAA) Board of Directors and ASAA's corporate partners, we produced this March Madness Alaska "State Qualifiers" program. The purpose is to recognize the teams for having succeeded in reaching part of their goals for the season. In doing so we acknowledge the cancellation of March Madness Alaska has also denied them the ability to reach the goal of winning a 2020 State Championship. The decision to cancel the event was an important one in helping combat the spread of COVID-19 in our communities. However, in making this decision ASAA realized we would be taking away an opportunity that many may never again have a chance to experience. This is especially true for this year's seniors. So, while everyone has been affected by this health crisis, it is important for everyone involved to salute our seniors – boys and girls who have sacrificed for 4 years now unable to reach the finish line, through no fault of their own. Class of 2020, we salute you.

To the coaches, school staffs and parents, thank you for continuing to support interscholastic sports and activities. Please know that the investments you have made into the lives of our students will help guide them through this health crisis and the rest of their lives. We are grateful to be a part of supporting you in this work.

To the student-athletes, while you have missed some of the most important games of your high school careers, the benefits of being involved will remain with you for a lifetime. The early-morning practices, offseason workouts and late-night studying after a day of activities will undoubtedly make you stronger and more dedicated in your future professions and relationships.

When discussing the merits of educational based activity participation, concepts such as "teamwork, dedication" and "sacrifice" are often mentioned. For now, the sacrifice being asked of you as students is understandably a hard one. However, we prioritize the health of our students, coaches, school staffs, fans and elders over the want to determine this year's champions. Once this health crisis has passed, ASAA believes educational based activities will once again help our communities and schools come together in a positive way. After a yet to be determined time of "social distancing" has passed, concepts like "teamwork and dedication" will be required to get us back to normal.

We thank you for the great memories given to us during this year's regular season and in prior years. We also look forward to witnessing how you will continue to stay involved. While some will have more competitive opportunities in sports, for others that continued involvement may be in the form of coaching or officiating, but the impact of participation will last a lifetime.

We look forward to once again seeing our students participate at state events. The great and exciting games are missed by all of us. However, for now we wish you and your families the very best in staying healthy and in all future endeavors.

Sincerely,

ASAA March Madness Alaska - A spectacle two decades strong

Despite this year's cancellation, March Madness Alaska thrives as the state's premier high school event!

In the six-plus years since retiring as Alaska School Activities Association Executive Director, Gary Matthews has run into March Madness Alaska participants of various ages a number of times.

"At a store or a restaurant, people come up and tell me they played on this team in this year and I of course do my best to remember," Matthews said with a smile. "Whether the former players played at a rural or urban school, one thing is always clear.

"The tournament and that time in their life is and was very important to them."

Two decades ago, Matthews, the ASAA executive board, officials and plenty of volunteers first implemented the idea of March Madness Alaska (MMA). High school activities deserved a grand stage, something to really anticipate, and basketball made the most sense.

"ASAA and its board wanted to have a premier event, a real flagship," said Don Winchester, a longtime volunteer, booster and arguably the state's foremost sports historian. "A common thread through all of Alaska is basketball. It ties the whole state together, so creating this version of the tournament became a natural thing."

MMA 2020 was going to salute the last 20 or so of the Alaska state basketball championships' 60-year history. But the two weeks worth of celebration and game action were officially cancelled March 14 to reduce the possibility of spreading COVID-19 (coronavirus).

"Cancelling a state tournament is not something we take lightly," ASAA said in a statement. "We recognize that for many students this opportunity will not come again.

"However, we prioritize the health of our students, coaches, school staffs, fans and elders over the want to determine this year's champions."

While this year's tournament is a no-go, it doesn't diminish the spectacle that MMA has become and will likely continue to be in the future.

In its current form, the basketball extravaganza consists of about 100 basketball and cheer squads embarking on Anchorage's Alaska Airlines Center over the course of eight days. That amounts to ASAA's estimates of more than 1,200 student participants, 250 staff members and 125-plus volunteers.

"It's really been an excellent event for those of us in the villages and the entire state," said Ramona Rock, a longtime resident of Point Hope and coach of the Tikigaq Harpoonerettes.

Point Hope is an Inupiat village located on the coast of the Chukchi Sea, about 700 miles northwest of Anchorage. The Harpoonerettes have won five Class 2A girls state titles and have historically been in the championship mix. Days before the 2020 cancellation became official, Rock talked about the prospect of qualifying for and playing in the state tournament. She agreed an appearance at March Madness Alaska always motivates high school athletes like the ones from Point Hope.

"The power went out in the village not long ago and we had practice," Rock said. "None of the girls left the gym to go home. Instead they all turned on the lights on their phones and we practiced. You can't teach that kind of desire."

MMA has taken on a few different forms since ASAA first secured the original copyrighted title from the Illinois High School Association. A fee of $10 first gained ASAA a three-year license to the naming rights.

"At first it was only Class 3A and 4A under the same roof," Winchester said. "The 1A and 2A tournaments were held in separate Anchorage schools. We did the large schools in Fairbanks for a couple of years before the move was made to Anchorage's Sullivan Arena.

"You could see the popularity in terms of the fan interest and the number of people who would come to town."

Winchester said the ASAA board wasn't initially keen on the idea of the smaller 1A and 2A schools playing in arenas like the Sullivan and the Alaska Airlines Center.

"The first thought was about possible embarrassment with those teams playing in front of small crowds in the big space," Winchester said. "But the potential for real growth was there. We all agreed that we wanted to offer a great experience for everyone and never really looked back."

A 2001 East Anchorage High graduate, Tom Marriage was part of some powerhouse squads. The Thunderbirds won state crowns in 1999 and 2000. Marriage's senior year saw East lose the 4A finale to upstart Kodiak in one of the state's most memorable sporting events.

It wasn't the finish he wanted, but the significance of MMA and playing under the then bright lights of the Sullivan weren't lost on Marriage and his teammates.

"I mean we were playing games on the same floor used for the Great Alaska Shootout, things were being televised statewide, it was the coolest thing," said Marriage, 37. "Some games had been played in front of packed high school gyms. But the Sully and now the Alaska Airlines Center, it offers you a glimpse of the next tier, what college basketball would look like."

Marriage currently works in advertising. As a member of the Visit Anchorage board, he's had the chance to recently deliver Player of the Game awards at March Madness.

"We should be commemorating the March Madness Alaska brand and all it embodies," he said. "As a kid growing up, I admired the guys before me like Trajan Langdon, Ma'o Tosi and Carlos Boozer down in the Juneau.

"I'm appreciative of the opportunity I was given."

In some ways, the March Madness Alaska celebration can now stretch on as ASAA and the state look forward to the 2021 edition despite the disappointment of the 2020 tournament's cancellation. Winchester said MMA marks another era in Alaska's sports history. The famed NCAA men's basketball tournament has changed. It started out with 16 teams and now has 68, 2020 cancellation notwithstanding.

"Alaska high school sports and basketball have different eras and we're not diminishing anything that came before March Madness Alaska," he said. "Now everything seems a bit bigger so you're seeing teams and players play harder and that much better.

"March Madness Alaska is off and running."

The excitement of a Friday evening game. Opening night applause. Friendships formed at early morning practice.

When you think of your fondest high school memories, chances are they took place outside the classroom. And you're not alone. Sports, the arts and other extracurricular activities are deeply ingrained in the high school experience. According to federal census data, more than 44 percent of American kids ages 12 to 17 participate in sports, and 29 percent participate in other clubs.

In Alaska, there's one organization working behind the scenes to organize dozens of those activities: The Alaska School Activities Association. Commonly known as ASAA, this nonprofit strives to provide every student the opportunity to grow and learn through activities that range from athletic to academic, traditional to technological.

"We see ourselves as an extension of the school day," said ASAA Executive Director Billy Strickland. "A lot of those things that you're learning in the classroom, you get to go apply in real-life settings." And the lessons often follow students for a lifetime -- long after their high school days have passed.

The football family

Talk to anyone who's ever played football at Chugiak High School and they'll recognize the name Tom Huffer. But you might need to clarify which one you're talking about.

First there's Tom Huffer Sr., a former college football player who landed in Alaska courtesy of the U.S. Army. After leaving the service, Huffer went into education with one objective in mind: He wanted to coach. When Chugiak was a brand-new school, Huffer helped start its very first football team, and he's been a part of Mustang football nearly every season since as a coach, parent, grandparent, or proud fan. It wasn't always easy.

"We didn't win too many the first seven years," Huffer said. In fact, "we got hammered quite hard."

That started to change in the late 1970s, and in the '80s, Chugiak grew into an Alaska football powerhouse, winning multiple state and conference titles.

"That's when Tom Jr. enters the picture, of course," Huffer said.

MAKING IT | ASAA & FIRST NATIONAL BANK ALASKA

Tom Huffer Jr. -- known as "Huff" to his friends, and simply as "Junior" to his dad -- was the first Alaska football player to be selected for all-state honors in three positions (kicker, tight end and linebacker) two years in a row. He was a state wrestling champion, too, followed 16 years later by his younger brother John-Paul, another standout high school football player who is now on Chugiak's coaching staff.

"All of us were involved with ASAA from day one," Tom Huffer Sr. said. "They just do good things for kids."

And not just kids who play football, Huffer Jr. added.

"My son was big-time into playing instruments in the band," Huffer Jr. said. "That became a big thing in his life. There are so many opportunities that ASAA promotes in music, in debate and drama, in mock trial stuff. There are so many things that they help with that support every single kid. That's awesome."

Activities for all

Formed in 1956, before statehood, ASAA was originally established to unify two regional high school sports organizations in the Territory of Alaska. As schools grew following statehood and the oil boom, ASAA was formally organized under the state Department of Education and Early Childhood in the 1970s and funded by the state.

That funding was abruptly cut in 1986, when Alaska experienced a severe economic downturn. The ASAA board voted to incorporate as a 501(c)(3) nonprofit independent of the state, but it took time to work out the legal and financial arrangements. Today, state statute allows Alaska school districts to become dues-paying members of ASAA as long as the association upholds specific organizational standards, but at the time, the future looked uncertain for high school activities in Alaska.

"When we lost state funding in '86, the association kind of muddled along for about a three-year period," Strickland said. "Then the bank really came in and basically rescued us."

First National Bank Alaska signed on as ASAA's first-ever title sponsor in 1989, contributing financially and providing employee volunteers at championship events. Other corporate sponsorships eventually began to follow the bank's example. It's an important source of income for an organization that, like the state itself, has a "three-legged stool" revenue structure.

"Generally speaking, about a third of our budget is school dues," Strickland said. "About a third of our budget is tournament gate revenue, and about a third is corporate sponsorships."

That final third -- sponsorships -- is important because it helps ASAA keep activities affordable and accessible to all students. First National's 30-year title sponsorship has also made it possible for ASAA to elevate experiences for students from every community in Alaska -- hosting state tournaments at the Alaska Airlines Center or bringing in out-of-state guest conductors for the all-state music ensembles, for example.

"It allows us to do more for our students, provide more services to our member schools, without having to increase school dues or increase the entry fees at state tournaments," Strickland said.

Absent that sponsor support, most tournaments would operate at a loss. But the organization's mission is to involve students, not make money.

"We're not about providing a return to our shareholders," Strickland said. "We're trying to get students motivated to achieve some goal. That's motivating (them) to keep (their) grades up, to have good attendance, to have good behavior in school." In the long run, he added, that's good for everyone in Alaska.

"Ultimately it's helping our state have community members that are more productive and being the kind of citizen you want," Strickland said. "Our goal is to make the student better while a student and in their adult lives as well. We want every student to have an opportunity to participate in an activity that's going to help them develop these positive life skills."

The benefits of being involved

Activities aren't just good clean fun. Teachers will tell you they're a powerful tool to promote positive behaviors and academics. Students have to stay out of trouble and maintain a minimum grade point average of 2.0 to participate in ASAA activities.

"You learn self-discipline," said Huffer Jr., who was inducted into ASAA's Alaska High School Hall of Fame in 2011, the same class as Stanley Cup winner Scott Gomez and Olympic gold medalist Kikkan Randall. "That's probably the biggest. You learn how to work with people and understand other people's ideas and opinions."

Studies have also shown that involvement in school activities directly affects students' perception of their schools and consequently improves their academic achievement.

"If you can get a kid involved in sports, that keeps them grounded, keeps them involved with other people," Huffer Sr. said. "It makes a better experience for the kid, better overall education."

And it's not just sports, Huffer Sr. added. His name might be on Chugiak's football stadium, but as a former school counselor, he's seen firsthand the importance of helping a student discover what they personally get excited about.

"Whatever a kid's passion is, it's an important part of what we do and what we are," he said.

Students who are engaged in multiple ways -- academic, social, extracurricular -- are more likely to succeed academically and less likely to drop out. Those benefits are especially meaningful in Alaska, which has a high school graduation rate that's significantly lower than the national average -- and another reason it's important that ASAA offers so many different programs.

"We have a wide variety of activities that we offer, with the intent of making it really hard for a student not to find something that they can get excited about," Strickland said. "We pride ourselves on being an activities association, not just an athletic association."

In recent years, Huffer Sr. helped develop a girls' flag football program that has proven to be tremendously popular. There's "mix six" coed volleyball, too, which is a hit with small schools that have a hard time filling teams. ASAA also has programs in drama, debate and forensics; music; world language; student government; and even esports.

"As society evolves and as different activities become popular, we've tried to kind of stay on what is going to keep the students motivated," Strickland said. "We're always looking at things that will increase participation."

That motivation leads to growth, according to Huffer Jr., who has watched his own three children and countless of his student athletes grow through school activities.

Three generations of the Huffer family who have all been involved in ASAA pose at the ice rink, including Tom Sr., brothers Tom Jr. and John Paul and John Paul's son, Tyler. (ASAA)

"I saw a lot of individual kids really go from point A to point B, to where they wanted to be," Huffer Jr. said. "To me, it was really satisfying, watching these kids progress with what they wanted to do."

And he knows from his own experience as an ASAA student athlete that those experiences have a lasting impact. Now retired, Huffer Jr. still credits ASAA activities with giving him a strong foundation for life.

"It's really helped me become the person -- the family man and coach and person -- I am," he said. "Without (ASAA), kids wouldn't have these opportunities. That's the bottom line."

King Cove standout named player of the year for the second straight year

By Jeremiah Bartz | Frontiersman.com

As a junior at King Cove High School, Elaina Mack was dominant on the basketball court. Mack averaged more than 37 points per game and led the Rookies to a 1A girls basketball title.

Mack set the bar high before she entered her senior year. But the King Cove standout found a way to exceed it. Mack lifted her average to 40.1 points per game, led her team to an undefeated 23-0 season and helped the Rookies extend their winning streak to 55 games.

And for the second straight year, Mack has received 1A's top honor. Mack has been named the Wasilla Lithia Dodge/Alaska Association of Basketball Coaches 1A Player of the Year.

"Her knowledge of the game has improved tremendously," King Cove head coach Gary Lamar said. "She has the quickness, she has the speed. But her knowledge of the game has stepped up with speed and quickness. A lot of people have speed and quickness, but they don't know what to do with it."

Mack scored more than 50 points four times this season. Her game low was 30 against the Wasilla junior varsity. Wasilla finished the season as the top-ranked 4A girls program in the state. Mack scored 44 points to lead King Cove to a win over Galena, the second-ranked team at the 3A level.

Lamar said Mack does not shy away from tough competition. That's what makes Mack's season that more remarkable, Lamar said.

"This whole year we only played a handful of 1A games," Lamar said.

The Rookies played a schedule full of 2A, 3A and 4A teams.

Lamar said Mack continues to draw interest from collegiate programs. Mack has been in contact with schools from Alaska, Washington, California and Oregon. Mack is a great student, Lamar said. She is third in her class with a 3.9 grade point average. Mack has the drive. Lamar said, every practice, Mack will not leave the floor until she hits 100 three-pointers. She is also humble, Lamar said.

"She's not high maintenance. She's down to earth," Lamar said. "She's a blue collar basketball player and works her butt off and does everything she can."

Shishmaref senior repeats as player of the year

Last season as a junior, Edward Kokeok helped lead a Shishmaref squad stocked full of seniors to a third-place finish in the 1A state tournament. Kokeok was also named the state's top player at the 1A level.

The 2019-20 season was a little different for Kokeok and the Northern Lights. Shishmaref graduated six seniors from last year's squad, and Kokeok was the lone returning starter this year. But Kokeok continued his high level of play, and once again received a top honor. Kokeok has been named the Wasilla Lithia Dodge/Alaska Association of Basketball Coaches 1A Player of the Year.

"Our team was pretty young. He really built this team up this year by getting everyone involved," Shishmaref head coach Tyler Ivanoff said via email.

In addition to Kokeok, Shishmaref started two freshman and two sophomores this year.

"When you know you have a great player on a team, you get those around you better. Ed did that this year. He was unselfish with the ball, and used his leadership by helping those around them get better," Ivanoff said.

Kokeok averaged a double-double as a senior, Ivanoff said. He averaged 29.2 points per game and pulled down at least 10 rebounds per game. Ivanoff also estimated that Kokeok finished with at least eight assists and three blocks per contest.

Kokeok managed to do all of that while opponents continually put a tremendous amount of pressure on the senior.

"Since he was a strong basketball player, a lot of teams put their defensive focus on him," Ivanoff said.

But even when the pressure was on him, Kokeok was able to take advantage, Ivanoff said.

"He was unselfish, so he'd make an easy pass to someone who was open," Ivanoff said. "On fast breaks, if someone was ahead of him he'd hit them for an easy two."

Overall, Ivanoff said Kokeok played a key role in the evolution of the squad.

"Ed was instrumental on making our team stronger," Ivanoff said.

Unalakleet coach calls senior standout 'a natural leader'

By Jeremiah Bartz | Frontiersman.com

Unalakleet head coach Steve Craft had a quick way to summarize Jewel Wilson.

"She's a natural leader," Craft said.

Wilson is Unalakleet's student body president and the class valedictorian with a 4.0 grade point average. Craft said Wilson has her sites set on attending medical school.

"Most coaches say when you're a student-athlete, you're a student first and then an athlete," Craft said.

Wilson is also regarded as one of the top athletes in the 2A girls class. The senior has been named first-team all-state by the Alaska Basketball Coaches Association.

Wilson is a three-year starter for Unalakleet and averaged 20 points per game as a senior. Craft said a key for Wilson, is she plays to her strengths.

"She doesn't overextend what she does," Craft said.

Wilson's abilities also helped fuel Unalakleet's aggressive style.

"Attacking the basketball," Craft said. "Most of her scoring is off the fast break. She can hit threes, but our offense is basically attack. Go right to the hoop."

Craft said Wilson does not shy away from competition.

"She's not afraid to compete," Craft said. "Some of the games they try to take her out of the game by being really physical, but she keeps playing."

Craft said Wilson's leadership abilities are displayed on the court in games, and in practices. At one point during the year, there was a miscommunication regarding the practice schedule.

"She ran the practice for an hour before I got there," Craft said.

Versatile Cordova senior named 2A's top player

By Jeremiah Bartz | Frontiersman.com

Christian Adams has been a big part of the Cordova boys basketball program for the past four seasons. Adams is a three-year starter. But even though Adams came off the bench as a freshman, he still led Wolverines in scoring and rebounds.

Now, Adams can cap his stellar career with Alaska's top honor. Adams has been named the Wasilla Lithia Dodge/Alaska Association of Basketball Coaches 2A Player of the Year.

"One of the things that really stands out in my mind, at point guard he runs our whole system," Cordova head coach Bert Adams said.

Christian Adams is a 6-foot-3 guard, but can play and defend all five positions, Cordova's head coach said. The senior can finish around the rim, pull up for a jumper or hit the three-point shot.

Adams averaged 17.2 points, 8.7 rebounds, 5.1 assists and 2.4 steals as a senior, and shot 55 percent from the floor. In one of his biggest games of the season, Adams finished with 30 points, 19 rebounds, 8 assists and 4 steals.

Bert Adams said there a few areas in which Christian evolved greatly as a player during his time with the Cordova basketball program.

"His decision making is the big improvement through four years," Bert Adams said.

Christian also grew as a distributor of the basketball, Bert Adams said, and with those personal improvements came, Cordova grew as a team.

Bert Adams said Christian does intend on playing college basketball in the fall. Christian has drawn interest from UAA and Snow College in Utah has invited him for a visit.
